

S. P. Stevens, the outdoor advertising man, has a collection of early Americana which almost defies description. Along with Indian relics, turn-of-the-century footwear and old newspapers, he has guns from the revolutionary, civil war and early western periods. Much of all this is on display in the gun room of the Stevens home in the 200 block of Windsor dr.—a room with a big fireplace over which hang two oil lamps from an old whaling vessel. And we could go on and on.
